NFL- DONATES $1 MILLION TO AMERICAN RED CROSS TO AID IN HURRICANE SANDY

PREGAME SALUTE TO FIRST RESPONDERS.

Kernersville, 04.11.2012, 03:11 Time

USPA NEWS - The National Football League and the NFL Players Association jointly pledged $1 million to the American Red Cross to aid in relief and recovery efforts in the northeast to assist those impacted by Hurricane Sandy, Commissioner Roger Goodell.

In addition, the NFL and its network television partners will run pregame and in-game messages and mentions to promote donations during this weekend's games, beginning today with Thursday Night Football.

"We are pleased that NFL owners and players have joined together once again to support communities and families impacted by Hurricane Sandy," [?] said Goodell and Smith in a joint statement. "This contribution on behalf of all 32 clubs and players throughout the league will help the American Red Cross assist people in need in the affected areas. We salute the dedication of those who have been working so hard on the rescue, relief and recovery effort." [?]

Prior to the playing of the national anthem, clubs will recognize with a special announcement those impacted by the storm and salute first responders and others involved with the relief effort.

In addition, there will be on-air mentions and a crawl on the bottom of the screen during portions of all games on all networks pointing fans to the American Red Cross website (redcross.org) and text-to-give line (text REDCROSS to 90999 to give a $10 donation).
